SPOTLIGHT

American Structurepoint has a team of professionals dedicated to working with leaders to plan the future for communities across the nation. Our planners and landscape architects inspire the people they serve and take pride in helping leaders make their dreams a reality by developing plans to help communities thrive. Our planning team focuses on the vision and strategies, and creates funding options needed to implement realistic, achievable goals community by community.

One example is the redevelopment of Lehman Park in Berne, Indiana. City officials knew there were opportunities to reimagine the 11.5-acre park; so they consulted with American Structurepoint's planning and economic development team, who guided them through our Vision2Action process to help realize the park's full potential. Now, Berne leaders have a new vision and financial plan of action to make the Lehman Park Conceptual Master Plan a reality.

One of the most important aspects of our planning process is getting input from the public. As our team developed plans for Lehman Park, we attended Berne's Swiss Days festival, where we engaged with local residents to get their opinions and ideas for the park. After gathering key insights from the public, American Structurepoint professionals met with a steering committee to develop the full site plan.

The final vision enhances and celebrates Lehman Park's existing unique features by preserving the mature tree canopy, creating purposeful and organized activity zones, and setting up a framework to support future park events. Lehman Park will be a go-to destination for generations to come.
